Scott Paglia, North By North Whatever

referring to the media: As a former journalist I can tell you this: they sell fear and WE buy it by the bucket load.

The part of the brain that looks for trouble/danger is the amygdala. Once we are stressed or in danger that part of the brain fires nonstop.

We eat up this doom and gloom because we are trying to sate that constant, relentless drive to see what is wrong.

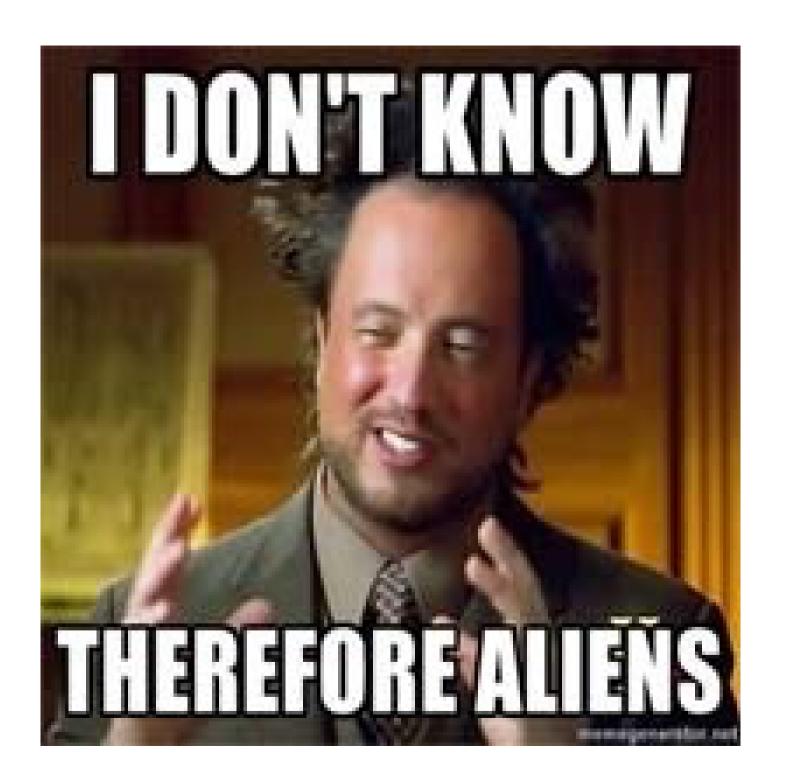

The irony is, it's not in the paper or news.

The problem is the who/what that is reading

My editor said, time for a life lesson. We have nothing really to print so lets search the wire. He found a story about africanized bees being spotted a couple hours north of us.

He posted the story substituting killer for africanized.

That edition sold 40% more than an earlier one.

Afghans too busy fighting Taliban to train, says US general

Efforts to build up the Afghan military have been delayed by heavy fighting and high casualties...This raises the specter of US troops not pulling out on schedule, or even being sent back into Afghanistan.
